Nicole Skoetz is a computer scientist and a medical doctor. From 1989 to 1993 she worked as a computer scientist for a pharmaceutical company. Thereafter she studied medicine and received her medical degree in 2002 from the University of Cologne. From 2002 to 2005, she was the consumer co-ordinator for the CHMG. Afterwards she worked as project manager in a university-based contract research organization, planning, conducting and analyzing clinical trials.

In January 2008 she rejoined the CHMG as Managing Editor of the CHMG. In this position, she was member of the Managing Editor Executive Committee and the Monitoring and Registration Committee. In June 2011 she became Co-ordinating Editor of the CHMG, together with Andreas Engert.
